Community Sergeant Update

PS Stephen Granger

It is the start of the school summer holidays which will be a well-earned break for teachers, pupils and their families. COVID-19 has impacted negatively on all areas of our communities and in particular children and young people. Mental and physical wellbeing has been effected and education and learning has been disrupted. Families on lower incomes have experienced particular hardship and placed under significant pressure. Although the situation with the pandemic seems to be improving children and young people will continue to struggle to deal with the after-effects and getting back to normal.

The Police Scotland website has Young Persons Advice pages specifically aimed at young people between five and nineteen years old. These pages give a wealth of advice on everything from personal safety, life at home, children's rights, drugs/alcohol and where to seek help. These pages can be accessed by clicking <https://www.scotland.police.uk/youth-hub/> and I would ask this be shared throughout communities.

The holiday period will also see an increase in children/young people gathering in public places and although those likely to engage in disruptive behaviour are in the minority please can the community remain vigilant to any anti-social behaviour. To allow us to impact more meaningfully matters should be reported to Police at the time so we can try to identify those responsible. This should be done via 101 or in an emergency via 999.

As I referred to in my last report there will be an increase in people holidaying in the UK due to current travel restrictions and as such roads will undoubtedly be busier than normal. With this in mind it is important to:

- Plan extra time for your journey
- Pay attention to speed limits and other road users
- Follow local COVID-19 restrictions

With this increase in travel in mind I wish to highlight the annual Police Scotland Summer Drink Drive Campaign. This is about increasing motorist awareness of the risks associated with drink/drug driving. The campaign will involve a combination of intelligence-led high visibility patrols and static road checks by all operational police officers including Roads Policing Units. The aim is to enforce legislation through detection of offenders, reduce the occurrences of Road Traffic collisions particularly those with alcohol and/or drugs as a causation factor and finally educate drivers and discourage them from drink/drug driving through high profile policing and media campaigns.

Anyone with information related to persons driving whilst intoxicated should report this promptly to police via 101 or 999 if it is ongoing. Alternatively contact Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800-555-111 or online at www.crimestoppers-uk.org.
