Community Policing News – Leaderdale and Melrose – PS James Harrison

An issue that is frequently brought to my attention is speeding. Road Safety is a priority for Police Scotland and we have set guidelines for how we deal with speeding issues. A noteworthy extract from this guidance is 'Deployment of resources must prioritise sites which represent the greatest risk and should only be undertaken where considered necessary and in the interest of casualty reduction'.

We assess reports of speeding using a number of different methods. One of these is by using www.crashmap.co.uk to find evidence of a casualty profile. Another is to liaise with Scottish Borders Council to establish if a speed survey has been conducted recently. Scottish Borders Council publish their speed surveys online at <https://scottishborders.azurewebsites.net/scottishborders/map-full-view>

A speeding complaint will be allocated police resources according to the level of risk it represents. We do receive reports that, once a survey has taken place, seem to be an issue of perception rather than speeding. If there is no casualty profile, and no evidence from surveys of a speeding issue, then we cannot justify allocating significant resources. Routine responses to this will be in the form of speed gun checks outside a nearby school, or Pop Up Bob being deployed by a local Community Officer.

Scottish Borders Council can carry out speed surveys if you believe there is a persistent speeding issue. If a genuine speeding issue is identified they may be able to consider such things as repainting lines or putting in additional signage to reduce speeds, or even engineering solutions. This also gives police evidence of the issue and will enable us to dedicate further resources. In such cases we can start to utilise the Roads Policing department or the Community Action Team, who will include these areas into their patrol matrix. A Safety Camera Van may also be deployed (however these will not enforce a 20mph limit).

While Road Safety is a priority for Police Scotland, our ability to address it will always be dictated by resources. I will finish with the words of our Local Area Commander Chief Inspector Fisher, 'In summary, we receive many complaints of speeding and our response to each is carefully considered. Before carrying out any speed enforcement, it is essential we can evidence a speeding related casualty profile, and that deployment of resources is justified in terms of casualty reduction potential.'
